Box : 1131 Kigali-Rwanda Phone Number: +250 782 341 855 Client: NGO CSI Luxembourg Main project features: CSI is an NGO based in Luxembourg and founded in 1989. Since 1991, the organization has been approved by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Luxembourg. CSI's main objective for the projects is fair access to basic, inclusive, high-quality education. The association grants its aid without distinction of origin, ethnicity, sex, religion and opinion and ensures that these criteria are respected by its local partners. According to its vision, CSI is committed to ensure that every human being is aware of his or her dignity and that of others. This way he/she can develop his/her potential and participate in creating a more equitable and supportive society. CSI's mission depends on partners in the South, as CSI works with local organisations to provide marginalized children and young people with a basic education that enables them to take their full place in society. CSI has signed a framework agreement with the Government of Luxembourg which covers the years 2021- 2024. This framework agreement includes 11 projects, one is implemented by our local partner “Maison Shalom” in and around Kigali, Rwanda. The partnership with Maison Shalom has been going on for many years. The current project started in January 2021 and will come to an end in December 2024. This audit is a requirement from the Luxembourg Government that fund 80% of the project budget. In addition, it can be helpful for Maison Shalom to get feedback on their financial management and it is good for CSI to check if the reports sent by the partners reflect the actual financial situation of the project. The financial scope of the project for the two years 2021 & 2022 is (according to the approved budget) 394.700 EUR. Please note that a large portion of the funds budgeted for 2021 was spent in 2022 only as the construction of the Kindergarden started later than initially planned.

Main project features:

Rwanda is being affected by the global changes in climate in many complex ways. These include climate related hazards such as floods, landslides and droughts as well as windstorms and severe rainstorms that have struck Rwanda in recent years with devastating effects on the population. These hazards have affected all districts and individual households across the country affecting the livelihoods and food security of rural and urban populations as well as the agricultural, energy, health, water, natural resource and institutional systems on which the population depends. Observations indicate a rise in average annual temperatures of about 0.7-0.9°C since 1950, Shifts in the timing of precipitation, which have important implications for agriculture, have been reported in certain regions, Extreme events associated with El Niño and La Niña episodes have intensified, Droughts in eastern and southern regions have resulted in a series of severe famines, Heavy rainfall in northern and western regions has led to erosion, flooding, and landslides, all of that imposed heavy costs in Rwanda(GoR,2011). The projected impacts of climate change may increase the frequency and compound the ramifications of these events, potentially undermining food security, health, and economic growth.

Respectively, the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) is the main global forum for climate change negotiations which was adopted in1992 by the counties joined international treaty and entered into force on March 1994. The UNFCCC created as a framework for international cooperation to combat climate change by limiting average global temperature increases and the resulting climate. In accordance with the principle of “common but differentiated responsibility and respective capacities” set out in the convention, developed country parties are to provide financial resources to assist developing country parties in implementing the objectives of the UNFCCC. Respectively in 2010 at COP 16, a fund within the framework of the UNFCCC, the Green Climate Fund GCF have been created as a financial mechanism to support the efforts of developing countries raise and realize their Nationally Determined Contributions (NDC) ambitions towards lowemissions, climate–resilient pathways and Rwanda started its engagement with GCF in 2014.

Climate change, including increased mean temperature and erratic rainfall, is negatively affecting rural communities in Rwanda. Erratic rainfall results in flooding events in the central and north-western highlands, whereas rainfall shortage and drought occurs in the eastern and southern lowlands. Consequently, major sectors in Rwanda are affected by climate change, including agriculture and water. Such effects include: i) decreased agricultural production because of soil erosion, reduced soil moisture and water availability; ii) decreased agricultural yields because of crop damage from flooding and landslides; and iii) decreased quality and quantity of water as a result of flooding and droughts, respectively. The proposed project will demonstrate the benefits of EbA by using intervention sites in the most vulnerable areas in Rwanda. To maximize the sustainability and upscaling of the interventions,
